Farm Labor Contractor Education Institute

About the Class

Every person applying for or renewing a farm labor contractor (FLC) license in California must take at least eight hours of relevant, educational classes each year [California Labor Code 1684(b)(2)]. Only classes approved by the state labor commissioner may be taken to meet this requirement.

The Farm Labor Contractor Education Institute offers an eight-hour course that has been approved by the state labor commissioner.

Training Topics

- Farm Labor Contractor requirements
- Cal/OSHA and safety requirements
- Workers' compensation insurance
- Employment insurance
- Wage and hour rules
- Pesticide safety
- Farm worker transportation and housing requirements
- Agricultural Labor Relations Act
- Preventing sexual harassment in the workplace

Class Presenters

The classes will be presented by industry experts who have been approved by the DLSE to present specific topics. Participants attending the classes will receive a certificate of attendance from the Farm Labor Contractor Education Institute.

Cost to Attend

The cost to attend a class is $180 per person for members of contributing organizations (see list on the other side). The regular rate is $200 per person for non-members. The rate for all late/walk-in is $220.

Cancellation Policy

No refunds will be issued. If you are unable to attend the class you have registered for, you may attend another session. Advance notification is requested to reschedule and attend a different class.

Renewal Questions for DLSE

For questions regarding renewal of your license and your continuing education hour requirements, please contact the DLSE at (559) 248-1893 or (415) 703-4854. The DLSE will review your file and answer specific questions regarding your license.
